

Corns and Callus

Corns and calluses are annoying and sometimes painful thickenings in the skin in areas of repeated pressure. A corn is a small area of skin which has become thickened due to pressure on it. It can be roughly round in shape. A callus is a larger and broader area than a corn and has less well-defined edges occurring primarily on the sole of the foot.

A common cause is wearing poorly fitting shoes. A Podiatrist is qualified to diagnose and treat these conditions and can advise on footwear, shoe insoles (if required) and padding to prevent recurrences.
